EXECUTIVE PROGRAM KINGSTON, JAMAICA

The Duke of Edinburgh's Emerging Leaders' Dialogues Canada (ELD) has developed a highly regarded leadership program that focuses on real world experiences, creates dialogue and builds the emotional and intellectual capacity of leaders. Caribbean-Canada Emerging Leaders Dialogues (CCELD) provides an opportunity for professionals from both Canada and the Caribbean to examine the relationship between industry and community across multiple sectors in a real life setting, and to be challenged on your assumptions and preconceived notions of what it takes to be a leader.

The 2019 CCELD program will engage 60 emerging leaders from 15 Commonwealth countries with our academic partners the University of West Indies and the Institute for the Study of International Development, McGill University. Three program themes have been selected in consultation with alumni and Caribbean sector representatives that are vital to the Region's economy:

Green and Blue Economies • Technology and Innovation • Culture and Tourism

Through CCELD's unique learning experience, you will develop key competencies in:

- » Cultural intelligence
- » Complex problem solving
- » Ethical decision-making
- » Collaborative negotiation
- » Inclusion & diversity
- » Promotion of innovation
- » Conflict management

The 5 educational modules, delivered by leading academics and practitioners will show how flourishing national and regional economies are rooted in structures of sustainability that include responsible and ethical governance, technical innovation, cultural intelligence, and collaboration.

During the 3 days of experiential dialogues, you will hear from diverse entrepreneurs and executives of business enterprises, labour unions, government departments as well as civil society organizations. As these sectors face complex economic, social and environmental issues, there are also emerging opportunities for innovation. You will also take part in dialogues within team groups that will challenge your leadership assumptions and provide insights applicable to positional, career, and organization opportunities.

PRESENTATIONS

CERTIFICATE CEREMONY

CLOSING CEREMONY

ELD Canada has given me a wider view of the global political economy and how we all fit into it. As a professional Accountant and a Trade Unionist I was able to see how financial analysis and workers' rights could be blended to shape my approach to dealing with national and regional issues and has placed me on a path to interact with leaders of governments in many countries and with international development partners. I am now the President of the Jamaica Civil Service Association, the largest public sector union in Jamaica; a Vice President of the National Trade Union Center, The Jamaica Confederation of Trade Unions; and sit on several boards inside and outside of the public sector.

EMERGING LEADERS' DIALOGUES CANADA

ELD Canada in collaboration with leading academic institutions offers unique and impactful programs annually in Canada and the Commonwealth, centred on themes such as leadership growth, ethics and good governance, and sustainable development. These programs extend connections between Canada and Commonwealth countries by developing social and economic ties and good governance practices.

ELD Canada's intensive in-field, experiential programs develop peer-to-peer critical leadership competencies, including collaboration, integration, and critical thinking. Emerging leaders gain experience and understanding of the processes under which multiple sectors operate and apply that experience to the betterment of their organizations, communities and countries as they advance as leaders. By working together, these sectors can connect the necessary knowledge, investment, technologies and resources to address issues which can often be overlooked by a single-sector approach.

Led by the President, HRH The Princess Royal, Princess Anne, Emerging Leaders' Dialogues is a not for profit organization with over 5,000 alumni around the world. ELD Canada Inc. is a registered Canadian charitable organization and a Commonwealth Accredited Civil Society Organization led by a Board of seasoned professionals.
